INTRODUCTION

Location

The Chiga people, or Abachiga ("people of the mountains"), are an ethnic group located in northern Rwanda and southern Uganda. The Chiga speak a Bantu language called Rukiga. They are sometimes referred to as the Chiga or Kiga, while the singular form is Omukiga. Additionally, a large number of Abachiga were still living in Rwanda at the time of European colonization.

The Ethnographical Location of the Chiga Ethnic Group in Uganda
History

The Abachiga people live in southwestern Uganda and North Eastern Rwanda, mostly located in Kabale District (and Byumba Prefecture in Rwanda), and number about 8% of the population of Uganda or nearly 3 million according to Population Estimates. Another 3 million have been naturalised in other ethnic regions of Uganda such as Bunyoro, Tooro, Buganda, Northern Tanzania, Eastern Congo and Rwanda as well as those living in Europe and North America. This puts the total population of people of Kiga origin at about 6 million. Among Bachiga people, the ruling person was therefore named Mukama, equivalent to Mwami in other parts of Rwanda.

Culture and Traditions

Meat was food reserved for special events in the community, mainly for births, weddings and funerals. Food was always prepared in abundance. It was and is still considered good manners for a visitor to join a family eating a meal without invitation. The Bachiga were producing beer, omuramba, from sorghum, as they still do today. To enjoy it, people would sit on wooden stools surrounding a pot, and drink it through long tubes. The non-fermented form of the same sorghum drink, called obushera, was consumed hot or cold. Some among the Bachiga were great ironsmiths who were making hoes, knives, and spears. Pottery was also highly developed, and a wide range of carpentry existed. They reared bees and produced honey. Women and men were both involved digging and bush clearing. Men were solely responsible for erecting the housing made out of grass thatch and papyrus. After a government decree in 1935 these hut walls were made out of mud, but still thatched with wild grass or sorghum stalks. Nearly all activities were done communally. Men were dressed in one cow hide, in two if they were rich. The skin hung from the shoulder, covering private parts. A man would belt himself for a fight or a dance, while for clearing land one would normally be naked. Women used skirts made from several skins. A skin garment covered the torso. A woman of a wealthy husband wore brass rings on her legs and arms. These rings could extend from the wrist to the legs, and from the ankles to just below the knees.

Virginity was very important. If an unmarried girl got pregnant, she would be taken to a forest, tied to a tree, and left to the mercy of animals. Alternatively, she would be thrown over a cliff. Kisizi Falls were most used for this purpose. At Lake Bunyonyi, a one meter high island was used for dumping these unfortunate girls. Migrating tribes or nomads unable to dowry for a bride would sometimes rescue these girls and take them for a wife. In these instances, the girl could never be returned to her community and had to move away. Though these practices have been stopped in recent times, unmarried girls or women who get pregnant today still face severe forms of alternative social sanctions within their communities or clans.
Marriage needed to be preceded by a payment of bride wealth, which meant cows, goats, and hoes. Polygamy was the exception rather than the norm, practiced in specific clans or segments of households when widow inheritance occurred following the death of a married family member. Women of a polygamous man would not be from the same clan, because marriages were one of the rare things to bond together a very politically segmented society. A girl spent about a month in seclusion before marriage, to become well fed and instructed in home management. Although permitted, divorce was very rare and greatly discouraged. When it occurred, common reasons for divorce included if a husband or wife was barren, lazy, or had other bad unsociable traits. Divorced people could remarry, however, the woman's family could expect less bride wealth next time. Disagreements that could be leading to divorce were first tackled by consultation of elders. Settling disputes was a major role of elderly members of a clan. Clansmen elected a lineage head on the criteria of character (truthful, brave, a war-leader) and power (a rich man, a medicine man, or a priest). Different lineage heads would gather and publicly discuss potential issues of wider concern. What lineage heads did not solve together could result in fighting between groups. The Bachiga were natural born-warriors. They were known as tough, hardworking people that made formidable enemies. They still are.

Traditionals dancing

The form of dance for the chiga is called the Ekizino. Ekizino is a royal dance from the chiga people of Kigezi. Musical instruments Omukuli (flute): The flute is widely popular in all regions of Uganda. It is played both as a solo and accompaniment instrument. Amakondere (trumpets): Low-pitched instruments are cut from the trunks of the pawpaw tree. High-pitched trumpets are made of antelope horn. Endingidi (fiddle): a one string instrument which is attached to a flexible stick with a wooden sound box and is played with a bow. It is tuned in a pentatonic scale. Enanga (trough zither): a zither with eight strings which run above a wooden trough. A zither is an instrument. It is mainly a story-telling or poem reciting instrument and it accompanies some dances in Kigezi Western part of Uganda. It is tuned in a pentatonic scale. Engoma (drums): In Bakiga Society, as one of the African traditions, drums bring the power that drives the performance and the rhythm of the vigorous dance.
The proverbs were used on a daily basis by the people of Chiga. Mostly the proverbs were used during birth, during initiation like circumcision, marriage, to inspire people, to warn those on the wrong path, to advice among others.

Examples of these proverbs and wise saying are:

1. Omuntu wobusingye niwe mukozi wobusingye omukayeye
Kiswahili: Mtu mpenda amani huteleta amani bomani kwake.
French: Une personne pacifique est un artisan de paix dans sa maison.
English: A peaceful person is a peacemaker in his home.

2. Nomurungi timurungi hataraho nkojo mbi
Kiswahili: Hata mrembo huwa na doa mbaya.
French: Même la jolie n’est pas sans une vilaine cicatrice.
English: Even the pretty one is not without an ugly scar.

Religion and Beliefs

Before the Bachiga were educated about Islam and Christianity, they believed in one God. The Bachiga understood God as creator who is neither male nor female, known as Ruhanga. God is also known through many attributes. As the supreme elder and the ruler of the universe, he is called Mukama. When associated with the power of the sun, he is Kazooba-Nyamuhanga. In his aspect as the one who makes things grow, he is called Biheeko. Many Bakiga with the influence of Christianity adopted 'theo-phoric' names.
The traditional Bachiga were a highly segmented society who came to Kabale in south Uganda from today's Rwanda. They believed in Ruhanga, the Creator of all things. They also had several cults, among which the most important was Nyabingi - the spirit of a much respected rain-maker.

Economic Activities

Abachiga were mainly agriculturalists, and kept significantly less livestock than other pastoralist groups in neighboring tribes. They grew sorghum, peas, millet, sweet potatoes, vegetables, and beans. These were supplemented with pumpkins, yams and variety of green vegetables.

Political

The family of the ruling clan, the Bamuhutu, possessed the inheritance powers of the name Mukama. If there is any person bearing the name Mukama, he must be a Bamuhutu, specifically a Mungura/Mwitira, or belong to the royal clan of the Bamuhutu. The Abukuru b-ekika was a committee of elders chosen by the clan to issue rules and administer justice. If a case was particularly serious and involved more than one clan, the cases would be heard publicly. An Omukuru, ideally a wise elder who knew the customs and traditions of his people, and who could be trusted to give fair advice and justice, was elected to preside over this expanded court.

A RESEARCH PROPOSAL FOR COLLECTION OF CHIGA PROVERBS AND WISE SAYINGS

By Kevin Namatsi

(Kenya)

INTRODUCTION

Location

The Chiga people, or Abachiga ("people of the mountains"), are an ethnic group located in northern Rwanda and southern Uganda. The Chiga speak a Bantu language called Rukiga. They are sometimes referred to as the Chiga or Kiga, while the singular form is Omukiga. Additionally, a large number of Abachiga were still living in Rwanda at the time of European colonization.

History

The Abachiga people live in southwestern Uganda and North Eastern Rwanda, mostly located in Kabale District (and Byumba Prefecture in Rwanda), and number about 8% of the population of Uganda or nearly 3 million according to Population Estimates. Another 3 million have been naturalised in other ethnic regions of Uganda such as Bunyoro, Tooro, Buganda, Northern Tanzania, Eastern Congo and Rwanda as well as those living in Europe and North America. This puts the total population of people of Kiga origin at about 6 million. Among Bachiga people, the ruling person was therefore named Mukama, equivalent to Mwami in other parts of Rwanda.

Culture and Traditions

Meat was food reserved for special events in the community, mainly for births, weddings and funerals. Food was always prepared in abundance. It was and is still considered good manners for a visitor to join a family eating a meal without invitation. The Bachiga were producing beer, omuramba, from sorghum, as they still do today. To enjoy it, people would sit on wooden stools surrounding a pot, and drink it through long tubes. The non-fermented form of the same sorghum drink, called obushera, was consumed hot or cold. Some among the Bachiga were great ironsmiths who were making hoes, knives, and spears. Pottery was also highly developed, and a wide range of carpentry existed. They reared bees and produced honey. Women and men were both involved digging and bush clearing. Men were solely responsible for erecting the housing made out of grass thatch and papyrus. After a government decree in 1935 these hut walls were made out of mud, but still thatched with wild grass or sorghum stalks. Nearly all activities were done communally. Men were dressed in one cow hide, in two if they were rich. The skin hung from the shoulder, covering private parts. A man would belt himself for a fight or a dance, while for clearing land one would normally be naked. Women used skirts made from several skins. A skin garment covered the torso. A woman of a wealthy husband wore brass rings on her legs and arms. These rings could extend from the wrist to the legs, and from the ankles to just below the knees.

Virginity was very important. If an unmarried girl got pregnant, she would be taken to a forest, tied to a tree, and left to the mercy of animals. Alternatively, she would be thrown over a cliff. Kisizi Falls were most used for this purpose. At Lake Bunyonyi, a one meter high island was used for dumping these unfortunate girls. Migrating tribes or nomads unable to dowry for a bride would sometimes rescue these girls and take them for a wife. In these instances, the girl could never be returned to her community and had to move away. Though these practices have been stopped in recent times, unmarried girls or women who get pregnant today still face severe forms of alternative social sanctions within their communities or clans.

Marriage needed to be preceded by a payment of bride wealth, which meant cows, goats, and hoes. Polygamy was the exception rather than the norm, practiced in specific clans or segments of households when widow inheritance occurred following the death of a married family member.
Women of a polygamous man would not be from the same clan, because marriages were one of the rare things to bond together a very politically segmented society. A girl spent about a month in seclusion before marriage, to become well fed and instructed in home management. Although permitted, divorce was very rare and greatly discouraged. When it occurred, common reasons for divorce included if a husband or wife was barren, lazy, or had other bad unsociable traits. Divorced people could remarry, however, the woman's family could expect less bride wealth next time. Disagreements that could be leading to divorce were first tackled by consultation of elders. Settling disputes was a major role of elderly members of a clan. Clansmen elected a lineage head on the criteria of character (truthful, brave, a war-leader) and power (a rich man, a medicine man, or a priest). Different lineage heads would gather and publicly discuss potential issues of wider concern. What lineage heads did not solve together could result in fighting between groups. The Bachiga were natural born-warriors. They were known as tough, hardworking people that made formidable enemies. They still are.

The form of dance for the chiga is called the Ekizino. Ekizino is a royal dance from the chiga people of Kigezi. Musical instruments:

- Omukuli (flute): The flute is widely popular in all regions of Uganda. It is played both as a solo and accompaniment instrument.
- Amakondere (trumpets): Low-pitched instruments are cut from the trunks of the pawpaw tree. High-pitched trumpets are made of antelope horn.
- Endingidi (fiddle): a one string instrument which is attached to a flexible stick with a wooden sound box and is played with a bow. It is tuned in a pentatonic scale.
- Enanga (trough zither): a zither with eight strings which run above a wooden trough. A zither is an instrument. It is mainly a storytelling or poem reciting instrument and it accompanies some dances in Kigezi Western part of Uganda. It is tuned in a pentatonic scale.
- Engoma (drums): In Bakiga Society, as one of the African traditions, drums bring the power that drives the performance and the rhythm of the vigorous dance.

The proverbs were used on a daily basis by the people of Chiga. Mostly the proverbs were used during birth, during initiation like circumcision, marriage, to inspire people, to warn those on the wrong path, to advice among others.

Examples of these proverbs and wise saying are:

3. Omuntu wobusingye niwe mukozi wobusingye omukayeye
   Kiswahili: Mtu mpenda amani huteleta amani bomani kwake
   French: Une personne pacifique est un artisan de paix dans sa maison
   English: A peaceful person is a peacemaker in his home

4. Nomurungi timurungi hatariho nkojo mbi
   Kiswahili: Hata mrembo huwa na doa mbaya
   French: Même la jolie n`est pas sans une vilaine cicatrice
   English: Even the pretty one is not without an ugly scar
Religion and Beliefs

Before the Bachiga were educated about Islam and Christianity, they believed in one God. The Bachiga understood God as creator who is neither male nor female, known as Ruhanga. God is also known through many attributes. As the supreme elder and the ruler of the universe, he is called Mukama. When associated with the power of the sun, he is Kazooba-Nyamuhanga. In his aspect as the one who makes things grow, he is called Biheeko. Many Bakiga with the influence of Christianity adopted ‘theo-phoric’ names.

The traditional Bachiga were a highly segmented society who came to Kabale in south Uganda from today's Rwanda. They believed in Ruhanga, the Creator of all things. They also had several cults, among which the most important was Nyabingi - the spirit of a much respected rain-maker.

Economic Activities

Abachiga were mainly agriculturalists, and kept significantly less livestock than other pastoralist groups in neighboring tribes. They grew sorghum, peas, millet, sweet potatoes, vegetables, and beans. These were supplemented with pumpkins, yams and variety of green vegetables.

Political

The family of the ruling clan, the Bamuhutu, possessed the inheritance powers of the name Mukama. If there is any person bearing the name Mukama, he must be a Bamuhutu, specifically a Mungura/Mwitira, or belong to the royal clan of the Bamuhutu. The Abukuru b-ekika was a committee of elders chosen by the clan to issue rules and administer justice. If a case was particularly serious and involved more than one clan, the cases would be heard publicly. An Omukuru, ideally a wise elder who knew the customs and traditions of his people, and who could be trusted to give fair advice and justice, was elected to preside over this expanded court.

OBJECTIVES

The objectives of this research on Bachiga tribe are:

i. To collect one hundred proverbs and wise sayings from the Bachiga people, from the elders and their general community.

ii. To translate these proverbs and wise sayings into English, Kiswahili and French, for reference by a wider group of readers.

iii. To find Biblical parallels to complement the Christian point of view.

JUSTIFICATION

This will help people to enrich their communication skills by using these proverbs and wise sayings and finding their application in their real lives.
METHODOLOGY

The writer will research and collect Bachiga proverbs and wise sayings from the Bachiga community in Kenya. The teaching and a Bible parallel will be added to each. One hundred of these proverbs will then be recorded for translation into Kiswahili, English, and French and be published in a booklet.
